

CARE OF POLICE SURVIVORS (COPS)

'Rebuilding Shattered Lives'

Press release

Enjoy a musical evening for good causes with the British Police Symphony Orchestra at the Royal Albert Hall

THE British Police Symphony Orchestra (BPSO) is celebrating its 30th anniversary with a thrilling concert of popular classics at the Royal Albert Hall in May.

The magical evening of entertainment on Saturday May 11 2019, will be raising funds for three good causes; Care of Police Survivors (COPS), a charity that supports the families of police officers who have lost their lives on duty, Youth Music and the orchestra itself.

Featuring over 670 performers drawn from the police service throughout the UK, the programme will include a medley of TV themes from some of our best loved crimefighters, music from James Bond and works by Sibelius, Quincy Jones and Wagner.

Chief Constable of Staffordshire Police and trustee of the BPSO, Gareth Morgan, said: "The passion and love for the BPSO from its membership is clear for all to see. We will deliver a brilliant event!"

The unique event promises to be a treat for all the senses, and will include an amazing spectacle when the prestigious London venue is filled with over 5,000 blue flashing lights during a performance of Rick Wakeman's Dance of a Thousand Lights.

The audience will also be enthralled by the voices of over 400 choristers, pipe-bands and fanfare brass, and TV favourite Nick Knowles will be presenting the feel-good event.

Tickets for the Charity Gala Concert start from just £19 and can be purchased from the BPSO's website at www.bpso.org.uk/bpso-rah/

PIC CAPTION: The British Police Symphony Orchestra performing at the Birmingham Symphony Hall in 2018.

Supporting the families of police officers who lost their lives on duty – www.ukcops.org T:01543 410790
Patron: Sir Keith Povey QPM BA -Registered Charity No 1170760 Scottish Charity No SC038541